ELBERT GLENN HAD SCARS.

Prisoner Refused to Allow Her Head to Be Examined.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 19.—To-day's testimony in the Ellis Glenn case related largely to scars, and the defendant persistently refused to allow herself to be examined for scars. Nearly all the State wintesses testified that Elbert Glenn has a scar on his head and a bad cut in his hand.

Witnesses for the defense, claiming to have examined her out of the courtroom, testified that she has no scars on her head or hand.

Phillip White of Marietta testified that he had slept often with Elbert Glenn and that he had a bullet wound on one arm, which Ellis Glenn has not. He was considered the defense's star witness.

Doctor A. N. Frame testified that he had examined Ellis Glenn and found no scars on her head or hands such as had been described by the State's witnesses.

Doctor W. J. Davidson testified that scars could be removed. The defendant refused to allow him to examine her head in the courtroom.

William Mason of Marietta, a barber, testified that he had often cut Elbert Glenn's hair and had once shaved him. On cross-examination he admitted that Glenn had no beard, but only a fuzz on his face.

Sherman Ponham, a witness for the defense, testified to sleeping with Glenn and that Ellis is not the same person.

On cross-examination he said he had seen a scar on Ellis Glenn's head.

Numerous witnesses testified to-day that they knew Elbert Glenn well, and that they think Ellis is not the same person, but only a few of them would swear positively that the defendant is not Elbert Glenn. Most of them based their opinion on the fact that Ellis Glenn is taller than Elbert was.
