GLORIA THE 'VICE GIRL' IS A MAN

By SUN REPORTER

A WOMAN accused of being a vice girl is really a MAN, a court heard yesterday.

Redhead Gloria Greaves, 50, had a sex change operation when she was 32.

She claims she is "irrevocably female"—but prosecutor John Bevan said yesterday:

"Although her clients may not have been aware of this, Gloria is still legally a man."

She and her husband Brian are accused of running a network of brothels specialising in bondage sex — which allegedly brought them £1,000-a-week.

Gloria's amazing sex change secret was revealed when they were arrested.

Sergeant Shirley O'Shaughnessy told Inner London Crown Court of a "strip search" at Hyde Park police station.

There was "some discussion" among senior officers as to Gloria's sex.

Eventually Sergeant O'Shaughnessy was given the search job and ordered Gloria to take off a jumper.

Gloria, 50, then admitted she used to be a man called Thomas Robertson.

Gloria and Brian Greaves, 42, of Warwick Way, Pimlico, West London, deny keeping a disorderly house and living off immoral earnings.

A third defendant Moira Tan, 46, — real name Millicent Bonkers—also pleads not guilty to keeping a disorderly house. The case continues today.
