

THE MAN-WOMAN.—Most of our readers will recognize the following portraiture in the Pall Mall Gazette of a conspicuous female habltue of most of our race-meetings: “Amongst the general company, we observed the man-woman, who is quite a new phenomenon; it is said to be a warm-blooded animal, carnivorous; its face is that of either a man or a woman; its hair is cut short after man’s fashion; it wore on its head a little straw hat (rather in the woman’s than in the man’s style), tied by (apparently) a shoestring under the chin; it had on an outer garment cut after the mode of a man’s coat, with two buttons behind at the waist, but below the coat-like garment appeared not trousers but a skirt; its ankles resemble a man’s; its bust resembles a woman’s; it is lively, affable, and apparently good-tempered; and it speaks as if it were in the habit of conversing in a gale of wind. It was much noticed, and its toilet created some sensation where the general effect of the sitters and promenaders was as if figures had walked out of the pages of Le Follet.—Sporting Life.
